Franck Greverie appointed Global Head of Cyber Security at Capgemini Group

Paris, October 1, 2014 – Franck Greverie has been appointed as the Global Head of Cyber Security and Corporate Vice President for the Capgemini Group. He will also lead Sogeti's Cyber Security practice. Sogeti, a wholly-owned subsidiary of Cap Gemini S.A, has a well established strong track record in the cyber security space. Franck's dual role will enable the wider Capgemini Group to also expand its security offer to meet growing client needs. This appointment takes effect immediately.

"We are delighted to welcome Franck to Sogeti and the wider Capgemini Group. He brings to the post a range of strengths including an impressive track record in utilities and defense which reinforces our extensive scope of security capabilities. He will be a key asset to meet the growing, business critical cyber security challenges that companies worldwide are facing every day," comments Hans van Waayenburg, CEO of Sogeti Worldwide.

Biography of Franck Greverie:

Franck started his career in various operational roles at Alcatel and Sema Group (today Atos Origin). From 2004 to 2008, he was Vice-President (VP) of strategy, business development and marketing for Thales' security activities, and VP of Thales Shield, which specializes in securing airports, transportation, oil and gas, and cities. Franck was then appointed Managing Director of the Information Systems Security and Cybersecurity activities for Thales Group (France, UK, Germany, Norway, USA, Asia). In 2012, Franck joined Bull as Executive VP of the Security Division, which includes cybersecurity and intelligence activities across the group. He was also in charge of the Middle East, Africa and Asia activities for Bull Group. In 2014, he was appointed Executive VP of the Infrastructure Division. Aged 45, Franck is a graduate of ESME, engineering school, and of the Executive MBA of ESSEC, Business School.
