Capgemini's innovative learning programs are recognized with six awards for excellence from the Brandon Hall Group

Paris, February 22, 2018 – Capgemini today announced that it has received a series of industry acclaimed Brandon Hall Group Awards for the strength of its innovative learning programs and commitment to the principles of digital age learning. Capgemini received the awards for the sixth consecutive year at the Brandon Hall Group Human Capital Management (HCM) Excellence conference held in Florida, USA.

The Brandon Hall Group HCM Excellence Awards are among the most prestigious in the corporate world, also known as the "Academy Awards" of the learning industry. The Brandon Hall Group recognizes excellence in business schools and corporate universities for achievements in both Human Capital Management and technology.

Capgemini's University won six awards for its learning programs in 2017 including:
Two gold medals for:

- Best Program for Sales Training and Performance for Cloud Sales Academy
- Best Advance in Leadership Development for the Leadership Exploration & Development (LEAD) program

Two silver medals for:

- Best Advance in Competencies and Skill Development for Cloud Sales Academy
- Best Use of Social Collaborative Learning for the Learning in the Digital Age initiative

Two bronze medals for:

- Best Advance in Learning Technology for the innovative Insights and Data portal
- Best Advance in Social Learning Technology for GARI (Give and Receive to Improve), a peer-to-peer learning platform.

Daylon Lutzenberger, Chief Learning Officer at Capgemini said: "We are extremely proud to be recognized by Brandon Hall for Capgemini's innovative workplace learning programs. These awards are testament to the success we have achieved as a learning organization in executing the Capgemini Group's vision and building stronger associations with our business, and learners. The number of awards we have won this year confirms that we are on the right path on our journey towards embracing the principles of digital age learning, by bringing targeted programs to our learners around the world more quickly and with greater operational agility."
